The latest entry in the 2nd new season of the 8th Doctor adventures takes the Doctor and Lucy to 19th century Sweden where the Doctor unexpectedly runs into a pair of foes from his past involved in a scheme to steal a diamond from the king. Not only are the thieves much more than they seem when the Doctor finds out that the jewel and painting are works of a particular obscure artist who is more than he seemed and the works themselves are more than what they seem as well. It looks very much like the Headhunter and her companion will become a reoccurring villain in the series. Since they are written well and acted even better this bodes well for future episodes. This one is a winner and the price is right, what more can anyone ask?T

This is an extremely clever concept. It's a Doctor Who heist story...with a recurring villain...a dangerous painter who can reshape reality...And the fate of countless billions of lives are at stake. Overall, this is Doctor Who at its finest with plenty of humor, a mind-blowing number of cool concepts, and great acting all around.

Had fun time listening to it, just wish it was longer. I give it five stars and two exclamation marks.
