When she wakes up, she is met once again with the reality: bedridden, hair falling out, and barely able to move. All Hannah wants is to have the simple pleasures of normal life, just like her close circle of Amish friends. Although her illness has taken away so much from her life, there is one thing it can't take away: love.

All the four girls of the Amish Circle are shocked when they find out Jacob, younger brother of one of the members, had been cheated by his longtime girlfriend. Grace is especially troubled, because she's recently been feeling attracted to Jacob. Then, as Grace finds out that Jacob spent a night together with his cheating girlfriend, she finally breaks down in tears.

That's why Jane gets excited to meet Stephen at the service, whose family moved in from a different community. But her hopes of courting Stephen are short-lived because their popular family restaurant keeps Jane occupied. Torn between her life and family and her love, what would Jane choose?
